GEORGE WASHINGTON IS EASY MARK FOR CORNELL

GEORGE WASHINGTON LOSES TO CORNELL

Ithacans Have Little Trouble Putting Kibosh on Hatchetites by 13 to 4.

Billy Carr, for Locals, Shows Better Form Than in Last Game.

Doyle and Orrison Star for Losers, While Deshon Is Best for Visitors.

George Washington was defeated by the strong outfit from Cornell University at Var. Ness Park yesterday by 13 to 4. The evening was an ideal one for baseball. It was sufficiently warm to allow the pitchers a good workout without fear of hurting their arms. A large crowd gathered to witness the first contest ever pulled off between the local institution and the Ithacans.

Though the game was the first played by Cornell on the Southern trip and it has hitherto practiced almost altogether indoors the play was of a very high order considering the earliness of the sea-son, and they give promise of making the other contenders in the big six hus-tle for intercollegiate honors.

Deshon in Great Form.

Deshon pitched the greater part of the game for the Ithacans, and was in excellent form. He is very short for a pitcher, is heavily built and has terrific speed with a very quick breaking and deceptive curve. He proved a puzzle to most of the Hatchetites, Doyle and Hester being the only ones to do any damage to his delivery. Love-joy was on the firing line for the Ithacans during the last two innings, and was touched up for a pretty two-bagger by Senior, which did not, howfigure in the scoring.

For the George Washington team Billy Carr, the lanky artist, did slab duty, and pitched a much better game than the score shows. The miserable fielding behind him at times when the team ed nervousness was responsible for

The feature was a beautiful catch by Senior of a hard drive into left center in the sixth inning. The popular fielder fell after capturing the sphere, but swung on and received the glad hand for his effort. Watson, the first-sacker for the Ithacans, also made a difficu

Interesting Despite Score.

Taking the game all in all, it was far from being a finished exhibition, but was full of good and bad plays mixed with some hard hitting, and proved interesting for the spectators. Although the Hatchetites made nearly a baker's dozen of errors, they showed at times a flash of real baseball and give promise of developing under a competent coach into a strong aggregation of ball tosser before the season waxes much older.

Cornell opened the first inning in good shape, when three hits and a couple of errors netted them three tallies. The should have had two, but for an unforon Hester's two-bagger,
